

Business Problem

Medical billing is a complex and cumbersome process in every medical practice. In addition, insurance companies have added to the frustration of medical practices by rejecting most of the claims. Surveys state that, on an average, about 30% of medical claims are rejected. If, by chance, claims are accepted, the insurance companies take about 60–90 days to pay the money to doctors. The claim rejection could be due to several reasons such as missing, invalid, incomplete charge details, and so on.
